Airport to Be Dedicated On Saturday

The Orange County Airport dedication ceremonies will get off to a high flying start Saturday with the staging of a spectacular air show featuring the Blue Angel's, the U. S. Navy's celebrated jet demonstration team.

In addition, there will be skydivers, penny-a-pound excursion flights piloted by the ninety-nines, an international organization of women pilots. There will be air demonstrations by Frank Tallman, and music provided by the El Toro Marine Band.

Dignitaries from all over the State of California and elsewhere in the country will be on hand for the dedication ceremonies, and the keynote speaker will be the Honorable Ronald Reagan, Governor.

The public is invited to attend all events starting at 10 a.m., and continuing until 5 p.m., at the Airport, corner of MacArthur Blvd. and Campus Drive.

Mission Viejo High Holds Big Open House In Conjunction With Public Schools Week

By Scott Cooper

In conjunction with National Public Schools Week, Mission Viejo High School held its first open house last Thursday. With an attendance of more than 300, the event fulfilled its aims of increasing public participation in school activities and the PTO and in demonstrating generally what goes on in the school.

A short PTO meeting began the evening. Here, its officers and the school staff were introduced. The music department then presented a program which was followed by classroom visitations.

Highlights of the visitation period included demonstrations of teaching methods, materials, and student work in every department. Especially interesting to the parents were the video tape facility used in the speech classes and the business machines used in business education.

"The Tustin Union High School District Science Fair," which was held simultaneously with the Open House was also a success. Students' exhibits which drew particular interest were those dealing with atomic radiation and biochemistry.

After visitations, the parents, teachers, administration, and district officials met in the cafeteria for refreshments served by the PTO.

Altogether, the evening was considered eventful and enlightening.

3 Mission Viejo Teachers Resign

Three teachers from the local Mission Viejo High School faculty resigned from their positions, effective at the close of the school year, at last week's regular meeting of the Tustin Union High School's Governing Board.

Teachers resigning include Ann Martin, Jay M. Neely and Mary A. Stoll.

El Toro 'Copter Sav Newport Man

A Newport Beach man was saved from possible death by drowning when the quick actions of a Marine Corps helicopter crew prevented him from sinking with his small boat, afire a half-mile off shore between Dana Point and Aliso Beach.

The Marine CH-46D Sea Knight helicopter from Marine Medium Helicopter Training Squadron (HMMT)-302 was on a routine training flight when a member of the crew spotted a burning boat below.

Further investigation revealed that Jim Schones, Newport Beach, was furiously battling flames aboard his 36-foot boat, "My Three Sons."

The helicopter crew immediately radioed Los Angeles radio control and they in turn notified the Coast Guard of the emergency.

Helicopter pilot Major Wiley R. Cable of Broadhead, Ky., descended his aircraft to try and control the flames with spray raised by his rotor wash. The fire later appeared to be of oil or chemical nature and the water spray was to no avail.

Recognizing the situation as fairly hopeless, Mr. Schones pulled off the heavier parts of his clothing and clinging to a flotation device, jumped overboard.

The Marine helicopter then descended onto the water to pick up the stranded sailor.

A Coast Guard Patrol boat arrived a short time thereafter and tried to bring the fire under control.

Schones was turned over to authorities at nearby Aliso Beach where he is reported in good condition.

Other members of the Marine helicopter crew were identified as Major Philip M. Schmidt, co-pilot; Staff Sergeant James W. Brantner, crew chief; and Sgt. Jerry L. Koons, assistant crew chief.

Committee Checks With Code About Seven Man Board Idea

County Organization Committee Given Power to Make Decision

"The Committee for a Seven Man High School Board" reported this week that they have checked out the California Educational Code on the matter and found out the seven man board concept is a local decision.

According to C. A. "Neil" Papp, of 13302 Malena Dr., Tustin, Article 1122 of the Educational Code states, "county committee school district organization shall have the power to establish trustee areas, rearrange the boundaries of trustee areas, or abolish trustee areas and increase or decrease the number of members of the Governing Board of a school district from five to seven in any school district except one governed by a board of education provided for in the charter of a city or city and county."

"All these actions," states Papp, "can be initiated by county committee or made to committee by petition signed by at least five qualified electors, or by the governing board itself."

Papp reported that he has discussed this matter with Jack Roper of the County Schools Office.

"The beauty of this transition," said Papp, "is that it is local from beginning to end."

Papp is presently working with citizens from El Toro on preparing recommendations for the high school district governing board on the seven man board proposal.

Papp has previously stated that tentative plans include two members to be elected from the Foothill high area, two members from the Tustin High area, two members from the Mission Viejo High area and one board member from Leisure World. Papp is strongly for the change since it would bring more democratic government to the Tustin Union High School District.

Chuck Waltman, of 23231 working with Papp on the proposal. Waltman is for the change in board structure since it will get the local people from the El Toro area involved in the high school district.

Marine Sgt. Spends Hours Saving Lives

He Conducts Classes in Perils of Venenous Snakes

Marines are expected to deal with unexpected devices--land mines, booby traps and the like.

But what happens when a Marine runs across a Naja Hannan, or a T. Gramineus--or perhaps a Trimeresurus Albolabris.

Explaining just "what happens" falls to Staff Sergeant Robert Ball of Marine Wing Service Group-37's message center.

Ball is teaching the group's Marines how to cope with unexpected encounters with the King Cobra, the Bamboo Pit Viper and the White-lipped Pit Viper, whose biological names appear above.

Such "face-to-fang" confrontations are not infrequent in combat in the Republic of Vietnam.

Ball hopes to part with knowledge which may enable Marines headed for overseas assignment to save life and limb by recognizing--and avoiding--contact with such venomous predators.

The sergeant is not unqualified to expound on the field of herpetology. He has been keeping snakes as pets since he was a youngster.

"I was deathly afraid of snakes as a child, and ironically, was drawn to the study of snakes by that same fear," he said.

The Third Aircraft Wing Marine has tamed snakes from every continent in the world except Antarctica in the past ten years and says that most of the superstitions surrounding serpents are really "old wives' tales."

"My classes are anything but dull," Ball relates. "With my two-year-old King Cobra, Copperhead, Rattlesnake and a very lively Bamboo Pit Viper in attendance, everyone pays attention."

REFLECTIONS...

Americans on Vacation

Summertime is around the corner again. The Americans are busy getting ready for the annual ritual of spending a vacation in a far away place.

No one can argue with the fact that most Americans work hard, perspire profusely, and worry incessantly during the fifty work weeks. One also cannot argue with the fact that the Americans deserve a suitable and an enjoyable vacation from the salt mines. But one can certainly argue with the manner in which most vacations are spent.

To spend ten days in driving and the remaining four days amidst penny-size mosquitoes and the terrible humidity of South Dakota is hardly a proper way to spend a vacation. When one comes back, the family needs another vacation to overcome the fatigue. Unfortunately this is never done.

Some of the great symbols of a successful vacation are a deep sun-tan, worn-out tires and nerves, twenty-foot trailer, stickers from all states, five-cent picture postcards to all the neighbors and friends, and a large loan for a reminder during the rest of the year.

It is all right to go through this torture a few times. But to repeat this show each year to be respectable in the community is beyond my comprehension. Air travel to foreign countries is changing the vacation habits of many Americans. Unfortunately, the air travels are no status symbols anymore as these are within the reach of any student or a working secretary. As a result a boat journey or frequent trips to unknown lands are becoming fashionable among the wealthy circles.

People should spend some vacations relaxing around their backyard pools, studying the problems that afflict our society, enjoying their homes and other belongings, and going to numerous resorts or beaches only minutes away from their homes.

I cannot help but enjoy the funny looks on people when they find out that I am spending my vacation around the house. Sometimes I really scare them by telling that I have sent my family to Canada in order to have another vacation from the dear ones.

COMMON STOCKS

Previous articles in this column may have led you to believe that everyone should buy stocks. That is not so.

Nobody should buy stocks unless he can stand to take a loss if their values decline. Prospective investors are urged by reputable brokers to take care of some other things first. A steady income is a must. So is an ample provision for emergencies--cash in the bank or savings readily available. Only funds over and above these emergency needs should be considered for stock investments.

Besides that, there are some people who, because of their temperament, should not buy stocks - no matter how much money they have. If you get upset by a little drop in prices, you shouldn't buy stocks. If you go off on a shopping spree at the first sign of a price rise, you shouldn't buy stocks. People with this type of nature are better off out of the stock market.

But, there are other investments that these people should consider. Government savings, bonds, municipal bonds, or high grade corporate bonds often meet investment objectives. Corporate bonds represent money loaned to the corporation. The corporation promises to pay the face value of the bond by a specified date. The bond buyer receives, from the corporation, interest on the loan, usually twice a year, until the bond matures and is redeemed. The market value of a bond is usually not so subject to change as is a common stock price.

So, in addition to deciding your investment objective, your temperament should also be examined before you buy stocks.

As with stocks, a reputable broker can help you select good grade bonds if they meet your needs better.
